

Kate and Ben

Kate and Ben, twin siblings, were born one July day at 23 weeks and 2 days, and both weighed just more than a pound each at birth. They share a close bond and more differences than you'd think.

After spending nearly six months in the NICU fighting to get stronger, both Kate and Ben began receiving ongoing care and therapy from specialists at Gillette Children's. While there, parents Sarah and Paul learned that both Kate and Ben had Cerebral palsy (CP).

"It's crazy to see how the kids differ," Sarah says. "With Kate, it's obvious how CP affects her physically. With Ben, you wouldn't guess from his appearance that he has CP. It is so different for every child."
